Under the British America Act, Lennox and Addington was divided into two constituencies and from 1867 to 1878 Mr. Csat for Lennox County. Being elected at the elections in the latter he was subsequently returned for Huxon, which he represented the close of the parliament, then elected for South Huxon since the general election of 1885 he has sat for south Oxford. Elected to one of the old Tory seats in Upper Canada, and in the course of his public career gave an able support to Sir John A. Macdonald.

RENOUNCED PARTY AFFILIATION

Since the period of the "Scandal" he has acted with a member of the Reform party, the resignation of the Macdonald administration, in November became finance minister in the then formed by Mr. Mackenzie continued in that office upon the defeat of the government, 8 Subsequently, while in opposition became chief spokesman for on all fiscal subjects, and in debate powers of oratory to other public men of his time only the Hon. Wm. Macdougall speech in seconding the vote to the volunteers who had the Northwest Rebellion, regarded as one of the master Canadian Parliamentary eloquence.

On Sir Wilfrid's accession in July, 1886, the late Sir Cartwright—he had been K.C.M.G., in 1879—became a member of the House of Commons, and engaged for some months in a new fiscal policy of the Government. In February, 1897, he undertook Sir L. H. Davies, a trade unionist in Washington.

Just before the general election of 1904 he was called to the seat from 1909 till the defeat of the administration was leader of the opposition in that body.

He was a large property owner in Kingston and its environs, given largely to charitable serving undertakings. He was president of the Women's Medical College, Kingston, 1887; Vice-President of the Trusts Corporation of Ontario, 1890; one of the three Trustees of the Equitable Life Insurance Company, president of Frontenac and Investment Company during its existence. Sir Riedard was of the Ontario Reform Club, and of the Eastern Ontario Association.

During Sir Wilfrid's absence from Canada in 1897, he discharged duties of acting premier, made a G.C.M.G., on the occasion of the 60th year of the late Queen Victoria's reign. He was a member of the Church of England, an ardent Franciscan, the elder of Col. Alexander Lawe, H. of Cork, Ireland.

Lady Cartwright is a vice-president of the local Council of Women.

OUR FIRST PARLIAMENT

It can be said of Sir Richard Cartwright that he was the greatest parliamentarian, as such, that the Canadian Commons, and member of it for the most of since Confederation. He was a parliamentarian style, he was deep in parliamentary lore, and that he went into parliament action with the armor and skill of Achilles and the Odysseus. And he could sor

HARD CARTWRIGHT DIED AT KINGSTON

Hard Cartwright died suddenly Tuesday morning. He was at the General Hospital, undergoing an operation for hernia. Sir Richard had rallied, his medical attendants every day, notwithstanding his advanced years. At 10 o'clock it was suddenly discovered that the venerable statesman had become unconscious, death finally being caused by heart failure to shock from the operation. He died peacefully, and was surrounded by his family, including Lady Cartwright.

He wished of the relatives that he should be a private one at St. George's, Barriefield, on Thursday, and that Rev. O. G. Macdonald, of Sir Richard, should flash those of his fellows who had parliamentary class or the promise of it.

In the private associations of the house he had the politest of manners and in debate most virile invective. His words were winged and they were barbed; so that on the whole he had a longer and more unbroken record as a debater than any other member of the Canadian House. Only once was he outmatched and that was when the late Sir John Thompson, after careful preparation and by selecting the suitable moment, was able to beat him in his own methods. His language was always scholarly and more than trenchant, and his delivery of the very best. His humor was sparkling and it was often sarcastic. He had one mannerism when addressing the house or an audience, and few people knew the physical cause of it; it was that he had little command of his head as placed on his neck, so that he lacked freedom to move one way or the other. Consequently he always turned on his heel and it was this peculiar wheeling of his body on the heel that caught the eye as unusual.

Sir Richard Cartwright could never get it into his head as he grew old that he was out of it or getting out of it. The rheumatic condition came when he was quite young in years, and therefore when it grew on him it was never taken as a hint. Nor was he as a matter of fact ever lacking in mental vigor until the very close. The lower house has about lost the last of its Nestors.

SIR RICHARD CARTWRIGHT.

THE PARLIAMENTARY CAREER.

On April 4, 1835, Sir Richard was elected his 77th year. He was the late Rev. R. D. Cartwright's nephew and the grandson of the late Cartwright, a prominent Empire Loyalist of his day, a judge in the court of common law in Upper Canada.

He entered public life as a member of parliament for Lennox and Addington in 1863, and continued to represent that constituency until 1871. Under the British North America Act, Lennox and Addington was divided into two constituencies, 1867 to 1878 Mr. Cartwright represented Lennox and Addington County. Being defeated in the latter year

During the period of the "Pacific" he has acted with and been a member of the Reform party, and on the occasion of the Macdonald addition, in November, 1873, he was elected minister in the cabinet of Mr. Mackenzie, and in that office up to the defeat of the government, Sept. 1878. While in opposition, he was the spokesman for his party on all subjects, and developed his powers of oratory superior to those of his time, save Sir John Wm. Macdougall. His seconding the vote of thanks to those who had served in the West Rebellion, 1885, is one of the masterpieces of Parliamentary eloquence. Wilfrid's accession to power, in 1888, the late Sir Richard Cartwright—he had been created a baronet in 1879—became minister of commerce in the newly formed government, and as such was for some months in framing the policy of the Dominion. In 1897, he undertook, with Sir Davies, a trade mission to the United States.

He was the general election of 1896, and the defeat of the Laurier government was leader of the government that body. He was a large property owner in his own and its environs, and was largely to charitable and de-deratations. He was elected of the Women's Medical Col-lege, 1887; Vice-president of the Ontario Corporation of Ontario, the three Trustees in Can-ada. Equitable Life Insurance president of Frontenac Loan ment Company during its first year. Sir Richard was president of the Ontario Liberal Club, Toronto. During Sir Wilfrid's absence from 1897, he discharged the duties of acting premier. He was created a baronet, on the completion of his year of the late Queen's reign. He was a member of the Order of St. John, and in 1859 was elected, the elder daughter of Sir Alexander Lawe, H.E.I.C.S. and C.E.I.C.S. Sir Cartwright is a vice-president of the Council of Women.

According to the Lancet, England's leading medical journal, the cigarette is the least harmful form of smoking. Exhaustive experiments as to the amount of nicotine in tobacco showed that the pipe was easily the worst, cigars next and cigarettes third, or least harmful.

A military man, who is known to be closely in touch with Hon. Sam Hughes, minister of militia, is authority for the statement that while in England, on his present visit, the Canadian minister of militia will arrange for the purchase of a number of tested and worth-proven airships for the Canadian troops. In correspondence, Col. Hughes has intimated the opinion that the aerial branch of the European army service is a feature developing very rapidly, and Canada must have a properly organized aerial corps to be efficient in military defence.

Wheat, Rye, Barley, Oats. All Away Above the Yial Year, Says the Report of national Institute of Agriculture—Canada's Wheat Bushels.

Winnipeg, Sept. 24.—Undertaking of "A Grain Block Under the Grain Growers' Guide to-day:

"All signs point to a continued movement of grain this year worse than that of last fall—bad as it was. The exceptional fall during the harvest is cutting as well as threshing weather last fall was unfavourable to the crop movement was retarded. But the grain at this year was moving in treble—it is at the present time season's crop is considerable of the 1911 crop.

During the two weeks of September 21 there were only of western spring wheat, specimen, as against 4,432 for weeks last year. The condition of last week which visited provinces delayed threshing and the crop movement will be from ten days to two weeks than last year.

"With these facts in hand, it is imperative that every effort be made to meet these most exceptional conditions. The railways will have to handle the grain that is coming. There is not enough capacity to accommodate the quantity of grain that can be taken from the lake front before the close of the season.

"Since the doors to the market are closed and locked, remedy in sight is to have railway rates to the south through rates to the south force for a time last winter forced a great deal of grain they were not put into enough. It is the plain duty of the Dominion Government and transcontinental railways to arrange at once with state Commerce Commission by which the south may be thrown open early.

CANADA AND EMPIRE

Premier Borden Expounds His Imperial Creed.

The Dominion's Needs Will Not Be Forgotten, But the Call of the British Empire at the Present Moment Is an Urgent One, He Says, In His Address Before 7,000 Persons at Banquet In Toronto.

Toronto, Sept. 24.—Toronto citizenship, irrespective of political faith, last night availed themselves of the opportunity to do honor to the Canadian Premier on his return from his initial Imperial mission to the Motherland. Approximately seven thousand people thronged the Mutual Street Arena in interested attendance at the banquet given by the Toronto Board of Trade.

The Imperial note was dominant throughout. Premier Borden emphasized the fact that at the coming session of Parliament he would have an important announcement to make.

The non-partisan character of the demonstration was made apparent in the hearty and enthusiastic reception which was accorded Mr. N. W. Rowell, K.C., the leader of the Provincial Liberal party.

"We have met here to-night to do honor to our own Prime Minister," declared Sir James Whitney, when proposing the health of Mr. Borden, "under the auspices of one of the most important commercial organizations of Canada."

"When the Prime Minister went to Great Britain, conditions in England were in a critical state," said Sir James. "The political atmosphere was charged with high explosives, which called for the greatest diplomacy."

It was only after a prolonged burst of cheering, and table pounding, and applauding that made the wide arena ring, that Mr. Borden was able to speak. Then he spoke, dealing chiefly with problems of country and Empire and only alluding long enough to the Government's naval policy to say that there would be no announcement until Parliament met.

tain the unity of that Empire, consistent with the free, self-governing principles of these overseas dominions, said Mr. Rowell.

Demand Non-Partisan Naval Policy. London, Sept. 24.—Premier Borden's speech at Montreal has aroused considerable interest here, newspapers printing long reports of it. pire and only alluding long enough to the Government's naval policy to say that there would be no announce- ment until Parliament met.

Mr. Borden evoked a burst of ap- plause when he gave as his creed, "that in so far as I have seen my duty I have endeavored to do it; and that I hope will be course through all my life.

"It has been born in upon me that no matter how great the heritage of Canada the heritage of Empire is in- finitely greater. I come back to this country more than ever inspired with the ability of the statesmen of the Motherland to work out those prob- lems that will confront the Empire.

"I was told that all through Europe the visit of the Canadian Ministers was receiving as much attention as in the British Isles.

"The maintenance of the Empire de- pends upon the maintenance of a sure path across every ocean," and con- tinuing upon this subject, Mr. B- rden suddenly referred to the Government's policy regarding Imperial defence, but those that thought he might dilate fully on the naval policy were disap- pointed. He went on:

"It is not for me to make any an- nouncement to you for although an audience like this is a great tempta- tion to a speaker to be indiscreet, I will stand by the rules of the consti- tution. And I must delay any an- nouncement until the Governor-Gen- eral calls us together at Ottawa and permits us to deliberate on matters of state."

' After alluding to Canada's growth and the welding together of scattered communities by Sir John Macdonald, Premier Borden, and great applause met his words, said, "that God grant that our relations with our neighbors to the south will always be as friend- ly as they are to-day.

"Our great inland waterways and our railways should be supplemented by great highways. I hope it will be the aim of the Provincial and Federal Governments to lend such aid that will enable the development of roads that will be the equal of any in Eu- rope, and of those being built in the country to the south. Not that we will divert from any of our policies of the past."

Coming back to his mission to the Mother Country, Mr. Borden de- clared: "I told them there that Cana- dians would not shirk their responsi- bilities when the needs of Empire arose, but Canada would not be an adjunct, but would demand to be al- lowed to assist. When peace or war are to be declared, this country, in its place in the Empire, would demand and ought to have, some correspond- ing voice in the discussions of the issues that mean peace or war."

N. W. Rowell, leader of the Ontario Opposition, who proposed the toast of the Canadian Parliament, paid tri- bute to Premier Borden as the most influential man in the present admin- istration. "And, although I am not always possessed of the same senti- ment and opinions as Sir James Whit- ney, it affords me great pleasure to be able to concur with him on this occasion," he declared.

When dwelling upon the gradual growth of governmental adminis- tration in the country, the Opposition leader declared that Canada was no longer a colony, but a self-governing portion of the British Empire. He re- ferred to the words of Balfour, who said, when speaking of Canada: "It is one of a coalition, not a colony de- pendent, but a free, self-governing community, which is an integral part of the Empire." It is the business of every loyal Canadian to help to main-

WOMEN TAKE NOTICE!

A man cannot understand the torture and suffering many women endure uncomplainingly. If the majority of men suffered as much pain and endured with patience the weakening sicknesses that most women do, they would ask for immediate sympathy and look for a quick cure.

Many women have been saved from a life of misery and suffering by turning to the right remedy—Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—a remedy which is safe to take because containing no narcotics, alcohol or injurious ingredients. It is an alterative extract of roots, made with pure glycerin, and first given to the public by that famous specialist in the diseases of women—Dr. R. V. Pierce, of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute of Buffalo, N. Y.

MRS. HESSELMER.

MRS. LIZZIE M. HESSELMER, of Lincoln, Neb., 529 "C" St., says: "I send a testimonial with much pleasure so that some suffering woman may know the true worth of your remedies. I was a great sufferer from female troubles but after taking one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which a friend advised me to take, I found myself very much improved. After taking three more bottles, and using two boxes of Dr. Pierce's Lotion Tablets, I found myself on the road to recovery. I was in poor health for five years but now I am cured."

"I hope all women suffering from female weakness will give Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription a fair trial."

Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules.

Sun Ray Plaiting In the Front Van of La Mode.

SILK FOR RUNABOUT FROCKS.

Fullness is to Be Found in the New Frocks, but Balloon Skirts Are Not the Type to Which Modish Women Have Resorted.

Behold the sun ray plaiting again in the front place of fashion and convincing in its softness and graceful lines and the countless opportunities for draping one filmy color over another and obtaining the rainbow effects that are always becoming.

Accordion plaiting is coming with a rush. It is here in a few advanced models of clever makers, but the fashion is too beautiful to be ignored, and prediction is here made that the plaited frock is to be a feature of late summer and fall styles.

Can you imagine the grace of a chiffon pannier plaited and held in at the lower edge by a deep band of em-

OLD NEW ONTARIO.

Traders Have Known Clay Delt For a Hundred Years.

People speak of New Ontario to-day as if it were a newly-discovered country. True, it is only within the past few years that they have awakened up to the fact that in time it will probably be the richest part of the province. But it is old, very old indeed, and to the redman there is nothing new about it. His father's father lived and hunted, fought and died in its forest fastnesses and there passed to the happy hunting grounds long before the "Shogonos" stranger came upon the scene. And it would have remained terra incognita to the white man to-day but for the discovery that it possessed much valuable agricultural and timber land. Then the Government began the building of the Timiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway, to open up these lands to settlement, and as construction proceeded they tumbled upon the rich mineral deposit in Cobalt. And so one fine morning Old Ontario awoke to the realization of the good things that lay just outside its back door and hastened to possess itself of them. The boom followed, and soon the name of Cobalt was known at every cross-roads on the continent.

This country is new enough to retain some at least of the landmarks of long ago, for the axe of the lumberjack and the plow of the settler have not had time as yet to obliterate many of the old trails. From time immemorial these have served as highways for the Indian and the voyageur of the ubiquitous Hudson Bay Company. Take the Montreal River above Elk Lake, for instance; the self-same river routes and portage trails are used by the Indians to-day that served their ancestors and the Jesuit missionaries of two hundred years ago when they carried the gospel far inland to the shores of Hudson Bay.

The Hudson Bay Company still find it to their advantage to continue many of their posts in this country. Of course these posts are separated by many weary miles of forest, lake and stream, that are only to be negotiated, as they were in the long ago, by paddle and portage. One of these posts is Fort Matachewan, on the Montreal River. It is a three-days' journey above the Elk Lake post, and for nearly thirty years has been in charge of Steve Lafrean, an ex-soldier of the war of the Rebellion. Years ago he secured the entire confidence of the

PRESS COMMENTS.

Calgary Herald—If the Borden naval policy includes the gift of battle-ships to Great Britain it would be a splendid thing to name them after the various Provinces of the Dominion.

Halifax Herald (Conservative)—We regret that this customs cruiser, required by the Government, is to be built on the Clyde instead of constructed in Canada by Canadian workmen, with Canadian material, and leaving the capital for circulation in Canada.

Ridgetown Dominion—And Botha, the erstwhile Transvaal rebel, has been made an Honorary General of the British Army. Botha is also Premier of the Union of South Africa. Here is a lesson that "Imperialists" might apply to Ireland but do not.

Ottawa Free Press—So Walter Long, M. P., is touring Canada to escape from the Ulster firebrands in the old country. When here, we advise him to keep away from Henri Bourassa, Hon. James Duff, The Toronto Telegram, Hon. Bob Rogers and Mayor Hopewell.

Toronto Globe—Mr. Borden says of Sir Richard Cartwright that he was a great Parliamentarian. It is a true saying. No man in Canadian public life has more effectively mastered the style of Parliamentary discussion. His appeal was always to the intellect.

Winnipeg Tribune—What we need most in Canada is more self-reliance of the good old British type. The Englishman, criticise him as we may, is an example to Canada, and until we follow his example self-reliance and higher development will make comparatively slow progress.

Hamilton Spectator—The "Single tax," as it used to be called, has survived adverse prejudice and thoughtless odium. It is no longer classed with the hare-brained schemes of extreme Socialists. It has won at least the respect and, to a considerable degree, the support of political economists and publicists of the highest rank the world over.

Winnipeg Tribune—In spite of what has seemed to be adverse weather conditions, reports from the harvest fields are most optimistic, and the wealth reaped from the soil in western Canada this year can only be described as enormous. Not only in the great products of wheat, oats, barley and flax, but in the root crops and fruit crops the yield this year is tremendous.

Toronto Globe—The Montreal Shareholder seems to know a good deal about the "inner life" of the Borden Ministry. It says "the internal dissensions and weaknesses of some of his Ministers would indicate that Mr. Borden's Government will not have a long lease of life. We would not be surprised to see an early appeal made to the country and to find that Sir Wilfrid was returned to power."

London Advertiser—The pro-reciprocity sentiments of the civic address presented to the Governor-General at Edmonton reflected western opinion, but they were out of place in view of the Governor-General's non-party position. We should hear more about this breach of etiquette but for the Congested Oratory Is Costly to Read.

Under our hand are three of Hansard, Parliament's tribulation to the wisdom of Hansards are useful books, not be read, but they do have a library look solid. The Hansard, handsome in a way, with black and minims, has an outward gravity and profound com may not be borne out by it. Most of the speeches talk say little. In the nature member of Parliament must great part of his thoughts stand in with his constituents.

Some people make it a pride to have a complete Hansard, from 1867 down to time. Outside of public libraries, a score of persons may have this full record of debates of Parliament. They for rarity and value with fine tall copies, and de luxe bi this is probably putting price on them. So far as is concerned, the older the better. The same may broidery? The fichu on this same delectable gown is accordion plaited and the waist defined by a wide girdle of panne velvet. Plaited ruffles edge the sleeves and the bottom of the underskirt.

Silk in plain or changeable colors is plaited for entire costumes that are adaptable for little runabout frocks or for elaborate afternoon gowns. Here is the fullness in decided form in skirt, sleeves and bodice.

Little accordion plaited jackets of soft chiffon and mousseline de sole are now threatening to replace the coatees of taffeta that have been such strong features. Evening wraps and lovely negligees are showing plaiting in either entire lengths or as ruffles on the berthas and sleeves.

As a swing of the pendulum of fashion in the opposite direction no feature of the modes can more clearly exemplify the vagaries than the plaited dresses that are invading the realm of dress. But one thing must be remembered. Fullness there is in all the new frocks, but balloon skirts are not the type to which we have resorted. There is still the straight line of the figure to be adhered to, and it must be admitted that the designers have given fullness in the plaiting without bulkiness, flowing lines without ugliness and a change without the usual shock. One meets the pannier gown everywhere. Pictured is a new model showing a modified pannier drapery that is very graceful. The material used is green and white "candy striped" taffeta, with trimming bands and petticoat of black taffeta.

A wide frill at the neck is echoed by narrow frills in the sleeves. Black satin boots with crystal buttons accompany the frock.

Bailey, instructor in penmanship prize, succeeded in carrying off the prize in a competition which had over ten thousand competitors from all parts of Canada and the United States.

Last year, the first occasion on which the prize was awarded, it went to James Rennie, another Toronto pupil.

above the Elk Lake post, and for nearly thirty years has been in charge of Steve Lafrican, an ex-soldier of the war of the Rebellion. Years ago he secured the entire confidence of the Indians as well as their trade by marrying one of their women, and has raised a family, some of whom have married Indians. He is the one "Shogonos" friend they implicitly trust, and the right man in the right place, and the great fur company know it.

The only innovation in the method of transport in New Ontario, as compared with the old days, is that the long boat of the white man is now used instead of the birch bark. Another old canoe route is that from Stony portage, on the Montreal River, to Gowganda and to Porcupine. During the Gowganda boom of three years ago this route was crowded day and night by prospectors and other representatives, both male and female, of the heterogeneous crowd that go to make up a mining town. To-day that trail is deserted, but for many years to come one may easily recognize it by the empty bottles, barrels, tin cans and canteens that mark every mile of it. Just such trails are to be found all over this country.—Toronto Globe.

Hard to Convince.

A certain western M.P. was once city editor of a big daily paper, and in Toronto newspaper circles they still tell a little story about his heated argument with the foreman of the composing room one day when they were crowded for space. There had been a rush of ads.—not enough for two extra pages, however.

The paper printed twelve pages daily.

"Well," said the editor man, "make it thirteen to-day."

The foreman tried to explain that this was an impossibility, and that if the paper were enlarged it must be to at least fourteen pages.

The editor could not see it, however, and all the emphatic and heated language of the foreman was in vain until in sheer desperation he hit upon the plan of getting a copy of the paper and demonstrating the plain proposition that each sheet has two pages.

And to this lay that unfortunate editor M.P. is "kidded" about getting out a thirteen-page paper.—Courier.

A Delhi Survivor.

One of the guests at the Toronto Exhibition luncheon recently was the only survivor in Toronto of the siege of Delhi, a pageant of which was given before the grand stand every afternoon and evening. His name is Duke Smith, 45 St. Clarens avenue, who, during the Indian mutiny, was attached to the 52nd Oxfordshire Infantry Brigade. He is 77 years old, but does not appear to have reached nearly that age. Mr. Smith served nine years—1853 to 1862—in the British army in India and was in several engagements during the mutiny. He now wears a medal as recognition of having fought in the war, and it bears a Delhi bar.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Edmonton reflected western opinion, but they were out of place in view of the Governor-General's non-party position. We should hear more about this breach of etiquette but for the fact that the Mayor of Edmonton, who read the address, is a Conservative.

Windsor Record—But alas! the complexion of the big National Exhibition at Toronto has changed. Gone are the pure Canadian farmers; absent are the real Canadian city residents; vanished or banned is the subject of Canadian politics. People who went to Toronto Fair this year had a dose of Imperialism that was strong enough and powerful enough to kill a horse, let alone a human being.

Kingston Whig—The man who supports a party and a cause is supposed to do so on principle. The man who changes sides before the election on some great issue, and who have no particular reason to expect profit by the change, are entitled to some consideration, but the men who change after an election, and for the loaves and fishes, deserve to be snubbed. They are certainly not entitled to any favors from the Government, and when they are given favors a premium is put upon hypocrisy.

Winnipeg Telegram—The most salient paragraph of the address presented to the Duke of Connaught by the Mayor of Edmonton on behalf of the City Council showed a refreshing ignorance of constitutional usage, and contained, besides, a display of boorishness of which it is hardly credible that a Canadian representative body could have been guilty. The address began by a declaration of loyalty to the British Crown, which is immediately qualified with the statement that Canada must have reciprocity, for "thus, and thus only, shall contentment and loyalty rest upon a permanent and abiding basis."

Montreal Star—It is difficult to believe that cattle which have been tested for tuberculosis in other Provinces and condemned as suffering from the disease are shipped into Quebec as an alternative to being destroyed as a menace to the community. The evidence, however, is conclusive. The health officers of Ontario acknowledge it, our own officials admit it, and the traffic continues unabated. There is nothing in the law to prevent a farmer loading all his tubercular cattle into cattle cars in Ontario and shipping them across the line into Quebec, and there is an abundance of irrefutable evidence to show that he is doing it all the time.

New Glasgow Chronicle—The position of the Federal Prime Minister is getting more awkward every day. To satisfy McBride—and McBride means British Columbia—the policy of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, of Canadian navy, must be followed. Undying opposition to such a program was sworn to in Quebec by the Conservatives during the last election. Premier Borden cannot live up to his promise to Quebec and satisfy his strong arm in the west. Nor can he put off the announcement longer. Premier McBride does not care a hang for Quebec; he is the one big man of British Columbia, and when he says he wants a navy for the west coast it means he will have it. Nor is he overburdened with any love for the welfare of the Federal Prime Minister and his Ministers that will induce him to smother any desire he may have along marine or other lines.

CELEBRATED RETORTS

WITTY REPLIES IN PARLIAMENT AND ON STUMP.

The Repartee of the Sons of Erin Very Frequently Enlivens the Debates of the British Commons—
Mixed Metaphors of Speakers Also Contribute to the General Gayety
From Time to Time.

More often than not it is Irish wit
which scores in the House of Commons, and many a time during an exciting debate both Conservatives
and Liberals have been nonplussed
by the ready repartee of M.P.'s from the Emerald Isle. There was one memorable occasion, however—and it is recalled by George W. Smalley in "Anglo-American Memories"—when Irish members were for the moment
stricken dumb by the retort of a member who could not afterwards be identified. Mr. Chamberlain, while speaking on the home rule question, said something regarding the Duke of Devonshire, whereupon a Nationalist member asked, "How long is it since the Duke of Devonshire has been in Ireland?" and from across the floor came the answer, like a flash of lightning, "Not since his brother was murdered in Phoenix Park."

Mr. Smalley considers this retort worthy to rank with Col. Sanderson's answer to a demand for his reasons against home rule. "There are," answered the gallant colonel, promptly,
"in this House sixty-nine good and sufficient reasons against home rule,
and there they sit."

Against this one might set the retort of Major O'Gorman, a genial and burly Irish member, who is said to have been the only man who could be relied on to make "Dizzy's" Sphinx-like face relax into a smile! "Why are the Irish always laying bare the wrongs
of their country?" quaqueroisly demanded a member in the House. "Because," thundered O'Gorman, "they want them redressed."

And apropos of the great Irish question one might recall the retort to a speaker at a public meeting in Ireland
in 1881, when Parnell and other Irish leaders were arrested. "How would you retaliate?" the speaker asked a crowded audience, and, after a dramatic pause, answered his own question
thus: "I'll tell you. The landlords will never get a penny of rent from you until your brave leaders are released." "Well, may they never be let out, then!" cried someone who could conceive no better prospect than that of never paying rent.

It was the irrepressible Mr. Tim Healy who provided another illustration of his witty sarcasm during a debate on the South African War,
when the Boers were winning battle
after battle. There was much criticism regarding the capabilities of officers and leaders, and some member put the question to Mr. Brodrick (now Viscount Midleton), then Minister for War as to how many horses he had despatched to South Africa. He gave an answer, whereupon Mr. Tim Healy got up and put a supplementary question: "Would the honorable gentleman kindly inform the House how many asses he has sent to South Africa?"

Mention of asses reminds one of the Irish M.P. who once interrupted the oratory of an enemy of his country
by ejaculating "Ass!" "The honorable member," came the lightning retort, "flatters me too much in claiming me as kinsman." And then there was the occasion when a scion
of a noble house, defending his order,
asked, "Is it not right that, in order
to hand down to posterity, the virtues
of those who have been eminent for their services to the country, their descendants should enjoy the honors conferred on them as a reward for such services?" "By the same rule," chimed in the late Mr. Labouchere,
"if a man is hanged for his misdeeds,
all his posterity should be hanged
too."

At election times the strenuousness
of political strife is considerably enlivened by apt retorts from the crowd and the platform. The heckler, of course, is much in evidence. Sometimes he scores, but usually the candidate comes off best in the bandy
of words. The apt retort of Mr. Winston Churchill, who, during the first election he fought, was asked by one of the crowd, who intended to ridicule
Mr. Churchill's youthful appearance,
"Does your mother know you're out?"
To which the future Cabinet Minister retorted, "Yes, and by Thursday she will know I'm in!" has often been quoted, and it reminds one of the retort of the Hon. Neil Primrose, who,
when he was putting up for the Wis-bech division of Cambridgeshire, was heckled at one meeting by a man in the crowd, who suddenly reminded him that he was supporting Lloyd George's budget, which his father, Lord Rosebery, opposed. Ultimately the candidate was asked whether this action on the part of his father did not amount to hitting below the belt.
"Exactly," said Mr. Primrose; "but when one's father does hit one, it generally is below the belt."

It was during an election, when a leading member of the Irish Bar was putting up as candidate, that, during an eloquent speech upon the woes
and injustices of his native land, he sought to impress his audience still further by squeezing out a few tears,
which trickled over his extensive cheeks. But the sublime was turned to the ridiculous when one of the gallery remarked, "Shure, boys,
there's a fine field for hydraulics."
This was as disconcerting as the reply made to Sir Richard Temple, who on one occasion returned post haste
from his duties in India to contest a seat. In the course of a speech he remarked that he had traveled 8,000 miles and surrendered $25,000 "for the privilege of representing this great constituency," and the audience was impressed until a remark, in a loud voice, came from the crowd, "Oh,
what a fool!"

Sir William Hart Dyke once said that "Mr. Lowther had caught a big fish in his net, and went to the top of the tree for it."

their constituencies; others are abroad, or summering. Dr. Michael Clark of Red Deer puts in the time between sessions on his Alberta farm.
He does not do his farming from a verandah chair. He gets out in the fields and into the mow and works as if he enjoyed it. Said the doctor with regard to crop prospects in a recent letter to a friend:

"If we only get three weeks' sunshine now, all is well. Danger from frost is over, with a minimum of damage. And the right weather for three weeks now will put crops beyond the reach of frost."

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

IT'S ALL RIGHT, BUT—

SMILE when the day is sunny;
Smile in the lonesome night;
Smile when a fellow's funny
And when he wants to fight.
Get busy with your grinning
When things are headed wrong.
It saves a lot of sinning
To pass the smile along.

The oh-be-cheerful fellow
Has found his voice, and now
With accents sweet and mellow
He softly tells us how He's found the secret clever
To put a grouch to flight.
A smile's the mighty lever
That tips it out of sight.

At least this is the gist of
The song some fellows sing.
If we could get the twist of
The wrist with which they fling
Their smiling dope about 'em
And scads get for the same We'd surely cease to doubt 'em
And get into the game.

The smiling's doubtless easy
When at so much per week
A grin that's strong and breezy Cuts gashes in each cheek.
But when a fellow's working
In trouble deep and wide
It's hard not to be shirking
The grinning on the side.

Compensation.

"They say love is blind."
"Maybe, but he is likely to have good teeth, though."

"Teeth?"

"Yes."

"How is that?"

"Love often leads to matrimony, and matrimony will cut anybody's eye

Just Like Jack.

"Did Jack want to kiss you when he said goodbye last night?"

"I—I don't know whether he did or not."

"You don't?"

"No."

"Didn't he say anything about it?"

"No; he just kissed me."

Must Be John.

"How very absurd!"

"When did John get home?"

"John? Why do you ask that?"

"I heard you say, 'How very absurd!'"

Clever.

"I am writing to Mamie."

"Yes, and such a long letter. What do you write about?"

Dr. Hennequin's Infant Tablets saved our little girl's life. Three doctors said she could not live. The Tablets cured her.—Mr. E. R. McBride, Napanee, Ont.

My baby was so weak from sickness that he could hardly walk. We thought he would die. We could find nothing to help him. I was given a sample package of three Hennequin Tablets; we used them; I saw a change at once. We secured the Tablets and our baby improved every day, and is now a bright, fat, good natured boy; you could not believe he was the same child. They certainly cured my baby and saved his life. I believe them to be the best medicine ever sold for babies. Mothers if your babies are not well take my advice and try these Tablets.—Mrs. JAMES RIDDELL Barrydale, Ont.

We have hundreds of such letters. If the Tablets were not what you need we would not offer to give them away and prepay them. If your baby is not well send for trial package. ### A Film Star.

To be a motion picture star is coming to be a recognized means of attaining great popular distinction, and one of the first actresses in the country to reach this pedestal of fame is Florence Lawrence, a Canadian girl.

She needs little introduction to the public—certainly none to the millions who go to picture entertainments. Her association with two or three of the elder motion picture companies where she first began to gain popularity some three or four years ago, on through her experience with other film organizations have given her a most unquestioned and unique position in this branch of drama. Now, that she is heading her own company with the name of Victor, it seems inevitable that she should go on to greater triumphs.

Miss Lawrence was born in Hamilton, Ont., to all appearances not very long ago, and began her stage career when three years old. Little Lord Fauntleroy was one of her parts. Before going into pictures she toured the West with the Lawrence Dramatic Players.

Live and Learn.

Dr. Sophia Jex-Blake, whose persistent efforts finally brought about the admission of women to the practice of medicine in England, remained wittily unimpressed by the bestowal of this privilege.

"It is absurd," she said, "to keep the door longer shut against young women, seeing how many old women were already inside."

Of a tireless eloquence, Dr. Jex-Blake once drew the incisive wit of Benjamin Jowett. The master of Balliol had sat next to her at dinner, and after the ladies retired he remarked, in his mild, high pitched voice:

"I always knew that lex meant law, but never till this night that Jex meant jaw."

and even cleanly to look. The claim that household women from looking well in is easily disproved, for in household where the lady gliding hand in the kitchen will thoroughly protect her, then, too, cooking, unless it so, is never dirty work. That woman commits an looks uncared for and badly the morning.

LDWICH TIME.

Some Delightful Novelties
Will Appeal to the Palate.

Vacation season at its height and the moment is such as hors d'oeuvre and Suppers served from buffer. There are teas, picnestic gatherings of several kinds that the cook
skilled hand is much in Here are some delightful
revelries:

Swedish Butter.—Cream or four ounces of fresh but-

the following ingredients:
red horseradish, chopped
in herb puree, curry paste,

pepper is also used for mixture and makes a capital utter. The above will be eddy good for buttering
and for sandwiches.

La Russe.—Shell four eggs and cut each in half and carefully remove the yolk through a fine sieve and little seasoned mayonnaise

Spread mixture upon thin slices of bread, arrange the slices upon the chicken puree.
Press together in the usual manner into desired shapes, sprinkle with sprigs of water-
cress and serve.

Sandwiches.—Cut very thin number of slices of an ham sausage. Butter

GOING IN FOR OYSTERS

CANADA MAKING AN EFFORT TO REVIVE INDUSTRY.

The Scarcity of the Luscious Bivalve Has Aroused the Maritime Fisheries Experts to Devise a Means of Building Up What Was Once an Extensive and a Profitable Commerce.

After twenty years of depletion the oyster fishery of the Maritime Provinces of Canada just now bids fair to take on a new lease of life. But it will no longer remain the oyster fishery. It will be known as oyster farming. Nature long attended to the trouble of sowing for the oysterman.
But he abused her kindness; and now
he has to learn the lesson that sowing comes before reaping.

Meanwhile the Canadian oyster is a rather scarce article, and its scarcity is measured in the price we have to pay. Twenty years ago a barrel of oysters could be obtained at wholesale for $1.90. Recently they have gone as high as $10 per barrel. So great has been the rise in value that in spite of a great falling off in the yield, the value of the catch has risen
by more than half. Thus in 1882
there were 64,646 barrels of oysters
taken, but they were valued at a little less than $128,000. In 1910 the catch was only 29,727 barrels; but the value
was $198,680.

So to-day we pay fifty per cent.
more for our oysters, but get less than half we used to get. Still we cannot blame nature. She treated us very generously until we treated her bar-barously, and then she gave up the struggle on her behalf with a broken heart.

The labors of the other oyster on behalf of humanity are quite staggering. There are various estimates of the number of eggs she lays in a year; but the smallest is 16,000,000.
Assuredly she cannot be accused of encouraging race suicide.

All her labors, however, have been in vain. So long as she had to meet only the vicissitudes of the sea, she managed to keep her family at about the same proportions. This was the day when our oyster fishery was prolific. From 1882 to 1893 the yearly production never fell below 50,000 barrels. Man's inroads seemed to be enormous; but so long as he confined himself to normal fishing operations
the supply did not fail. Mother oyster was able to meet the vicissitudes of the sea and minister to man's legiti-mate wants as well.

But man would not give Mother Oyster a fair chance. "One feels a sense of shame," says Mr. M. J. Patton, assistant secretary of the Commission of Conservation, "at the wanton waste that is revealed in the history of the Canadian oyster industry.
In early years oyster were actually burned in order to secure the lime in their shells. Ice fishing, which was not prohibited by law until the past decade, was another prolific cause of waste. The oysters were raked up from the bottom through a hole in the ice, the large ones sorted out for market, and the small ones left on the ice to perish with the cold. . . .
But it is the mud diggers that take
the palm as agents of destruction.

"When winter comes and the ice
forms, great power digging machines
can be seen dotting the ice over the oyster beds. The farmers'—that is,

BOOTH ANECDOTES.

The Late General Was a Man of Many and Varied Characteristics.

Many anecdotes are told of the dead
leader to illustrate his many-sided character.

In discussing the anti-suicide bureaus of the army he once said:

"Kindness and charity are factors of these bureaus. The charity will be of the right kind, I trust. There are, you know, two kinds of charity,
and too much of it is like the barber's.

"There was a poor deacon in Warwick who had no money and needed to be shaved, and he went from barber to barber, but none of them, despite his holy office, was willing to shave him for nothing.

"In the end, though, he found a barber who, on hearing his tale, said
gruffly:

"Sit down there in that chair."

"Suddenly the barber's dog in the adjacent room set up a terrific howling.

"Be still, there!" cried the barber.
And he muttered anxiously, 'What can
they be doing to him?'

"Alas," said the deacon, 'I shouldn't wonder if some one was shaving
him out of charity!'

On another occasion General Booth
was talking to a reporter.

"Are you saved?" he asked suddenly.
The young man flushed, stammered
and hesitated.

"Well," said the general, "do not despair. There is a chance even for reporters."

Then, discussing prayer, General
Booth told a story, a story with a moral.

"There was a young clergyman appointed to a small country town," he began, "and a short time after his arrival a horse-looking man in leggings
stopped him on the street one day,
bowed respectfully and said in a trembling voice:

"If you please, sir, would you mind
next Sabbath offering up a bit of a prayer for Milly Dean?'

"The minister, of course, assented.
The man, whose look was worried and haggard, took leave gratefully, and on the next and the two following Sundays Milly Dean was prayed for from the pulpit.

"Then one afternoon the man in leggings met the minister again.

"Thank you for them prayers, sir,"
he said, "but you needn't pray no more for Milly Dean."

"Why," said the other, shocked, "is she dead?'

"Dead?" said the man in leggings.
'No; she's just won the Blue Ribbon handicap by a length and a half!'

An instance of the fire and feverish anxiety of General Booth to compress
as much work as possible into the closing years of his ministry was provided on his missions by motor.
'Faster' was the word that impelled
the general ever forward, and it is to be feared that in his anxiety to carry the message into the remote villages
that are still off the main track he did not always observe the speed limit.
He frequently exceeded thirty miles an hour.

When his chauffeur was getting all
he could out of the engines the general's cry was still "Faster!" The car was capable of thirty-five miles an hour. That did not satisfy him. He always wanted to move quicker. He would sit on the front seat by the driver, whispering every now and again, "Faster!"

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
STORIA

"When winter comes and the ice
forms, great power digging machines
can be seen dotting the ice over the
oyster beds. The farmers"—that is,
the land farmers, not the oyster farmers—"consider that the mud and oyster shells, with their large percentage of lime, are valuable as a fertilizer for the land, and every winter
these machines cut the oyster beds to pieces, and suffocate all the oysters roundabout by the deposits of mud
that settle down."

So Mother Oyster had to give up the fight, and man had his way. From 1894 to 1901 the yield ranged from 40,000 to 50,000 barrels a year; and never since 1901 has it risen above 40,000 barrels, and in 1907 it reached the lowest in thirty years with a production of only 27,299 barrels.

Prince Edward Island has suffered most from these wanton methods of treating the oyster. In the palmy days of the oyster industry the Island gave us more than seven-eighths of our total yield, while for the last few years
it has sunk below New Brunswick.
In 1882 Prince Edward had 57,000 barrels of oysters; in 1907 the yield was only 9,672 barrels. New Brunswick touched its highest record in the lustrum from 1885 to 1890 with an annual yield of about 21,000 barrels;
its yield sank to 12,470 in 1903, but has since been rising, the yield in 1909 being 19,340. Nova Scotia's highest point was 4,318 barrels in 1891;
in 1909 the yield was 1,716. British Columbia has a yield which varies from one to four thousand barrels.
The Pacific oysters are not as large as those on the Atlantic coast, but some of the latter have been transplanted to the Pacific with success.

As Prince Edward Island has been the chief sufferer from destructive methods, so it is now taking the lead in the adoption of measures of conservation. The subject was fully discussed at the last meeting of the fisheries section of the Commission of Conservation, and Premier Mathieson
and Dr. Joseph Stafford of McGill University gave the committee the latest information on the progress of the plans.

The plan proposed by the Prince Edward Island Government is the leasing of oyster beds to individuals.
These beds will then be "farmed" by the individuals, who will sow seed and tend and reap the crop. The process will hardly show as quick returns as does ordinary agriculture.
It takes about four years for the maturing of the oyster from seed, and so the oyster farmer must have patience as one of his qualifications.

Incidentally, Premier Mathieson hopes to get quite a revenue for his Government from the beds. He estimates the area of the oyster beds at from 100,000 to 300,000 acres.

Bram Stoker's Advice.

The late Mr. Bram Stoker had a ready wit. Sir Henry Irving, whose manager and secretary he was, once told an amusing story of him. Hardly a mail arrived that did not bring Sir Henry a batch of begging letters. One day he got a note from Paris, which ran thus:

Dear Sir Henry—As I walk along the boulevard hardly a day passes on which I am not mistaken for you. The resemblance is extraordinary, and it is really most embarrassing, and I should be glad to know what you would have to do in the matter. Meanwhile the loan of a five pound note
would be much appreciated by yours truly.

"You'll look to it, Stoker?" said Sir Henry.

"Certainly!" was the prompt reply.
A day or to afterward the letter
happened to cross Sir Henry's memory, and he asked Bram Stoker what he had done in regard to it.

"I sent him a postal order for half a crown and told him to get his hair cut."

An Appropriate Hymn.

A certain professor of divinity who was spending the summer in the Scottish highlands was invited to baptize
the infant son of the local minister.

When the time for the ceremony arrived the guest gave out for congregational singing a paraphrase much favored on such occasions. "Let us,"
said he, "sing from the fifth paraphrase, beginning at the second verse,
'As sparks in close succession rise.'"

To his consternation, the congregation giggled audibly. Afterward, asking the clerk what he had done wrong,
that functionary replied, "You must know, professor, the minister's name is Sparks, and yonder is his tenth bairn."

Royal Measuring Board.

In the gymnasium of Buckingham Palace in London is an upright measuring board, on which the children of the King and Queen record their heights every few months. Each has a burning ambition to be tall, and there is said to be a keen rivalry among them as to who shall be the giant. Before the Prince of Wales left for Paris the first time, his younger brother had a slight advantage of him
in size, but during his absence he gained in width as well as in height.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Sept. 23.—At the Montreal
Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ended Sept. 21
were 1700 cattle, 3100 sheep and lambs, 2900
hogs and 550 calves, while the supply on the market this morning for sale amounted to 1100 cattle, 2400 sheep and lambs, 1500 hogs and 300 calves.

A firmer feeling prevailed in the market for really choice steers, owing to the continued scarcity of such, but the offerings of all other grades were ample to fill
the requirements, and prices ruled steady.
The quality of the stock coming forward
is far from being up to the mark, owing to the fact that farmers thruout the country are disposing of all their young cattle on account of the high prices ruling for feed. The gathering of buyers was fairly large, and, as they all wanted some beef,
the demand was good, and an active trade was done. A few choice steers sold as high as $7 to $7.25, while full loads of good cattle brought from $6 to $6.50 per 100 pounds.

An active trade continues to be done in lambs, owing to the fact that butchers
and packers are now putting them away
for their winter requirements, but, as supplies are coming forward freely, the tone
of the market was easier than a week ago, and prices ruled 25c per 100 pounds
lower, with sales of Quebec stock at $5.25
to $5.75, and Ontario at $6 to $6.25 per 100 pounds. There was also a weaker feeling in the market for sheep, and prices declined 25c to 50c per 100 pounds. The demand for calves was good at firm prices.

The strong feeling which has characterized the hog market for some time now
still continues to be the main feature of the trade, and prices since this day week
have advanced 30c to 35c per 100 pounds, owing to the small supply. Indications are that unless receipts increase in the near future values will go still higher.
Selected lots sold at $9 to $9.10 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

Useful Tips to the Jelly Maker.

Use good fruit which is a little under-ripe.

Use the best granulated sugar.
Do not make large quantities of jelly
at one cooking.

Heat the sugar in the oven before adding it to the fruit juice.

If the juice must be boiled down always do so before the sugar is added.

The jelly will be clearer and finer if the fruit is simmered gently and not stirred during cooking.

Do not allow the sirup to boil rapidly
or crystals may appear in the jelly.

Always make jelly on a bright, clear day.

Wash the jelly glasses in hot water
and set them on a folded cloth wrung
out of hot water.

Set the jelly in a sunny window for twenty-four hours, then cover with melted paraffin and set in a dry, cool place.

WHITE ESKIMOS.

Explorer Stefansson Is Sure White Men Mixed With Arctic Peoples.

Very interesting details respecting Eskimo life in general, and what is claimed to be a lost tribe in particular, have been received by Prof. Jas. Mavor, of the University of Toronto, from Mr. Vilhjalmur Stefansson, one of the leaders of the Anglo-American Expedition to the Arctic Seas. The expedition set out in 1905, and Prof. Mavor has since received a number of letters.

In a letter dated from Langton Bay Stefansson writes: "We have in four years traveled by sledge more miles than any other travelers in the Arctic who have tried to live in the country. We have discovered a dense population, as Eskimos go, in districts labelled 'uninhabited' in the 'Aborigines of Canada' map issued by the Government. We have found 1,000 people, and through them we know of another thousand—in Victoria Land—who never saw a white man, a rifle, or a sulphur match."

The explorers lived with a group of these people in southwestern Victoria Land who are strikingly non-Eskimo in type—in fact, more like North Europeans than Eskimos. Mr. Stefansson remarks that he realizes that this find is likely to lay them open to the charge of sensationalism. "I am aware," he writes, "that some authorities consider the admixture of white blood not the only explanation of the existence of small isolated fair groups among dark people. I am inclined at present to favor, though without insistence, the view that there is evidence of an admixture of a large amount of white blood."

"I have heard stories which lead me to believe that one or more survivors of Franklin's expedition lived for some years among the Eskimos in Victoria Land; but be that so, it will explain nothing, so far as the South-west Victoria Land physical type is concerned. If you date the origin of the fair type less than a century back and assume that the type springs from the marriage of white men with Eskimo women, then a thousand whites married among the Eskimos would be an insufficient number to produce the condition found. It seems to me that if admixture of white blood is the explanation of the origin of the fair type in Western and South-western Victoria Land, then the only historical event that can explain it is the disappearance from Greenland between 1412 and the 17th (?) century, (Hans Egede's Voyages) of the Icelandic (Scandinavian) colony of 3,000 people."

Writing from Shingle Point, Arctic Ocean, Stefansson says: "There seems to be nothing in the nature of a ceremony connected with entering into conjugal relations. There may be, and often is, an understanding between principals, but the essential is that the consent of the parents be obtained and then that of the prospective bride. A negative from any of these three settles it for the time being—otherwise the marital relations are entered into on the day of the agreement, and as simply as if they were being resumed after a short separation among us. The great majority of the marriages seem to be temporary. If they last beyond the year the chances are they will become permanent. . . . The line of division of labor is not always clear. Both sexes row boats and some women hunt deer with the rifle. Both tend fish nets. When there is plenty of time the women both cook and make clothes, but men often cook when the women are otherwise engaged, and often mend their own clothes for a similar reason. I have never seen anything approaching a quarrel between a man and his wife."

Edmonton Independent.

If reports are to be believed, Mr. Andrew Carnegie will not perpetuate his name in a library at Edmonton.

The Ironmaster, as is his wont, recently offered the Alberta city $60,000 for a library. The Library Board of Edmonton threatens to turn down this money.

Mr. Carnegie makes his offers for libraries on the basis of population. The Dominion census gives Edmonton 23,000 population. Evidently Mr. Carnegie thought $60,000 a sufficient sum to supply a city of this size with books.

But the Edmonton Library Board claims that the Dominion census figures are unjust to Edmonton; that there are 55,385 people in the city according to the civic census.

They have recommended that Mr. Carnegie's offer be refused, and the city undertake to erect a library in keeping with the importance of the city.

Detective Duncan Investigation Is Started In Toronto.

Toronto, Sept. 23.—The investigation by the city police commissioners as to the alleged laxity of Inspector of Detectives Walter Duncan in handling the papers of the Farmers Bank case promises to be much more far-reaching than was originally supposed. Evidence was taken at the initial sitting yesterday which went to show that there had been more or less general dissatisfaction and lack of confidence on the force itself with Inspector Duncan's handling of police matters.

Certain officers went so far as to say that the inspector's veracity was frequently called in question on the force, and that he had more than once endeavored to shift blame for alleged indiscretions of his own to other members of the force. A number of newspaper men were called to testify that the inspector had given them access to the papers in question, while the trend of all the evidence was to the effect that a friendly understanding existed between the inspector and Percy Haverson, a reporter on The World, through which the latter was accorded privileges denied to other newspaper men. The hearing resumes to-day.

Moving a Museum.

Progress and population are eternally playing hob with landmarks, especially in our older and bigger cities. The Education Department for the Province of Ontario for some generations since the days of Egerton Ryerson has with the Norman School and the Provincial Museum occupied St. James Square in the heart of Toronto. It is now about to move to the new premises in the rear of the Parliament Buildings in Queen's Park. The Normal School, which only a few years ago was enlarged owing to the abolition of model schools and the extension of the Normal term to one year instead of six months, will soon be housed somewhere else.—The Canadian Courier.

Basil King In Canada.

"I hope that you in Canada will not give your country over to aliens. I hope that Canada will pick and choose her immigrants, and will keep the Anglo-Saxon dominant."

So spoke Mr. Basil King, the author, in an interview recently, when he discussed the question of an immigration policy.

Mr. King is touring Canada. Perhaps he is not generally known to Canadian readers as a Canadian. This is probably because Mr. King's books have been surrounded with a certain air of anonymity. His first great success, "The Inner Shrine," with its scenes laid largely in France, was published without the author's name appearing on the title page. The book, both because of its merit and the mystery of its author, created wide discussion.

Basil King was for years a Halifax clergyman. He has given himself up recently entirely to literature, and has built up a big reputation as a popular novelist.

Montreal Men Honored.

Out of seven degrees of LL.D. conferred on prominent medical men who attended the bi-centennial celebration of the foundation of the medical faculty of Trinity College, Dublin, held in the capital of Ireland last month, two were given to Montrealers, ex-Mayor Dr. James Guerin and Principal William Paterson of McGill University.

The others who were given such a distinctive honor were the lord mayor of London, the lord mayor of Dublin, the president of the Royal College of Surgeons, the president of the Royal College of Physicians and the president of the National University of Ireland.

Another great honor and mark of appreciation of his research work was bestowed on Dr. Adami of McGill, who was made a doctor of science by the chancellor of Trinity University, who personally congratulated Dr. Adami on the valuable contributions he has given the medical profession.

...of the Original Sin of Adam precipitating all mankind into the dying and death state. He as strongly proclaims the Bible hope of a release for all on the basis of the precious blood of Jesus, who, as St. Paul declares, "tasted death for every man." Continuing his convincing logic the Pastor said:

"The Scriptural proposition that 'Christ died for our sins,' said Pastor Russell, 'further implies that Christ was not of the fallen race, for had He been He also would have been a sinner, and how could a sinner have died for our sins?'

"Thus our text teaches that Jesus was indeed 'the lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world,' and also that 'God so loved the world, that He gave His Only Begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish but have everlasting life.' Thus the whole force of our text to-day is that human salvation is secured by the death of Christ and by His resurrection. Were we not sinners and dying, we would have needed no one to die for us. Were it not to rescue us from sin and death, God would not have sent His Son."

"From this, the Scriptural viewpoint, we see the importance of Jesus' death and resurrection; we see that His death was necessary as man's Redemption-price, and that His exaltation to great power and glory was also necessary for man's deliverance from sin and death. Here we have, then, the Gospel which St. Paul received and preached—the true Gospel, the one of which he was not ashamed."

"Thus far we have merely seen the root of the Gospel as it centres in the promise made to Abraham, and in the Redemptive work accomplished by our Saviour," exclaimed America's Spurgeon.

"In his Epistle to the Romans (11: 16-24), St. Paul uses the illustration of an olive tree, and declares the branches to be the members of the 'Body of Christ, which is the Church.' The Israelites were the natural branches, and therefore had the first opportunity of becoming members of the Body of Christ. In fact, all privilege was excluded from the Gentiles until Israel's time of favor was complete—three and a half years after the cross.

"During those three and a half years the Lord's providence so blessed the Jews that they were all brought in contact with the Truth under most favorable conditions. We remember that thousands were converted and blessed at Pentecost and other thousands a little later. Every worthy branch in that 'tree' was accepted of the Lord—every 'Israelite, indeed, in whom was no guile.'

"St. Paul proceeds to tell us that then the unbelieving Jews, the remaining 'natural branches,' were all broken off and separated from Divine favor; and that then began the work of engrafting 'wild olive branches,' representing worthy Gentiles."

THE THREE GUARDSMEN

By ALEXANDRE DUMAS

"At the moment she entered the curtain of a small gallery, which to that time had been closed, was drawn, and the pale face of the cardinal appeared, he being dressed as a Spanish cavalier. His eyes were fixed upon those of the queen and a smile of terrible joy passed over his lips. The queen did not wear her diamond studs.

All at once the king appeared at one of the doors of the hall. The cardinal was speaking to him in a low voice, and the king was very pale.

The king made his way through the crowd without a mask and the ribbons of his doublet scarcely tied. He went straight to the queen and in an altered voice said:

"Why, madame, have you not thought proper to wear your diamond studs when you know it would have given me so much gratification?"

"Sire," replied the queen with a faltering voice, "because, in the midst of such a crowd as this I feared some accident might happen to them. I can send for them to the Louvre, where they are, and thus your majesty's wishes will be complied with."

"Do so, madame—do so, and that at the quickest; for within an hour the ballet will commence."

The queen bent in token of submission and followed the ladies who were to conduct her to her closet. On his part the king returned to his.

The king came out first from his closet. He was in a hunting costume of the most elegant description.

The cardinal drew near to the king and placed in his hand a small casket. The king opened it and found in it two diamonds.

"What does this mean?" demanded

was lost in the crowd gathered at one of the doors. He looked on at this scene, comprehensible only to four persons, the king, the queen, his eminence and himself.

The queen had just regained her chamber, and D'Artagnan was about to retire when he felt his shoulder lightly touched. He turned round and saw a young woman who made him a sign to follow her. The face of this young woman was covered with a black velvet mask, but he recognized Mme. Bonacieux.

On the evening before they had scarcely seen each other for a moment at the apartment of the Swiss Germain, whither D'Artagnan had sent for her. The haste which the young woman was in to convey to her mistress the excellent news of the happy return of her messenger prevented the two from exchanging more than a few words. D'Artagnan therefore followed Mme. Bonacieux, moved by a double sentiment, love and curiosity. She opened the door of a closet, which was entirely dark, and led D'Artagnan into it. There she made a sign of silence, and, opening a second door concealed by a tapestry and which opening spread at once a brilliant light, she disappeared.

D'Artagnan remained for a moment motionless, asking himself where he could be, but soon a ray of light which penetrated through the chamber, together with the warm and perfumed air which reached him from the same aperture, the conversation of two or three ladies in a language at once respectful and elegant and the word "majesty" two or three times repeated indicated clearly that he was in a closet attached to the queen's chamber," replied Planchet, "but there is one come of itself. When I came in, although I had the key of your apartment in my pocket, and that key had never been out of my possession, I found a letter upon the green table cover in your bedchamber. I left it where I found it, monsieur. Beware, monsieur, there is certainly some magic in it."

While Planchet was saying this the young man had darted into his chamber and seized and opened the letter. It was from Mme. Bonacieux and was conceived in these terms:

There are many thanks to be offered to you and to be transmitted to you. Be this evening about 10 o'clock at St. Cloud, in front of the pavilion built at the corner of the hotel of M. d'Estrees. C. B.

It was the first billet he had received, it was the first rendezvous that had ever been granted him. His heart, swelled by the intoxication of joy, felt ready to dissolve.

At 7 o'clock in the morning he arose and called his servant.

"Planchet," said he, "I am going out for all day perhaps. You are therefore your own master till 7 o'clock in the evening, but at 7 o'clock you must hold yourself in readiness with two horses. By this evening there will be four in the guard stables."

Nodding to Planchet, D'Artagnan went out.

M. Bonacieux was standing at his door. D'Artagnan's intention was to go out without speaking to the worthy mercer, but the latter made so polite and friendly a salutation that his tenant felt obliged not only to stop, but to enter into conversation with him.

Besides, how is it possible to avoid a little condescension toward a husband wise than perceive it and what was the matter.

"Nothing," replied Bonacieux, only since my misfortune been subject to faintnesses.

"Perhaps this evening M. de Treville will visit the conjeller?"

"Mme. Bonacieux is not this evening," replied the mercer. "She is detained at the Louvre this evening by her dear host."

And the young man departing at his joke, which he alone comprehended.

"Ah, have your laugh on Bonacieux in a sepulchral tone. But D'Artagnan was too

He found M. de Treville of his heart. He had thought and queen charming at the cardinal had been particularly perished.

"Now," said M. de Treville, "ing his voice and looking every corner of the apartment they were alone; 'now about you, my young friend, evident that your fortunate something to do with the king, the triumph of the queen, the humiliation of the cardinal, take care of yourself.'"

"What have I to fear," replied D'Artagnan, "as long as I shall good fortune to enjoy the their majesties?"

"Everything, believe me. I am not the man to forget cation until he has settled counts with the mystifier."

"Do you believe that th knows as much as you do that I have been to London?"

"London! Was it from L brought that beautiful diamond glitters on your finger? Be dear D'Artagnan; a present enemy is not a good thing."

"This diamond does not c an enemy, monsieur," replied D'Artagnan. "It comes from the queen! Oh, oh de Treville. 'Why, it is ind royal jewel, which is worth toles if it is worth a denier. did the queen send you this?"

"She gave it to me herself, related to M. de Treville he fair had passed.

"Listen to me," said M. de Treville, "I shall give you a good piece—a piece of friendly advice—'You will do me honor, I said D'Artagnan."

"Well, then, go to the nearest smith's and sell that diamond at the highest price you can get. He will give you at least 80 Pistoles have no name, you and that ring has a terrible c may betray him who wears it."

"Sell this ring—a ring which from my sovereign—never!" said D'Artagnan.

"Then at least turn the game silly fellow, for everybody aware that a cadet from Gas not find such gems in his mot el case."

"You think, then, I have to dread?" asked D'Artagnan.

The king opened it and found in it two diamonds.

"What does this mean?" demanded he of the cardinal.

"Nothing," replied the latter; "only, if the queen has the studs, of which I very much doubt, count them, sire, and if you only find ten, ask her majesty who can have stolen from her the two studs that are here."

The king looked at the cardinal as if to interrogate him, but he had not time to address any question to him. A cry of admiration burst from every mouth. The queen was, without doubt, the most beautiful woman in France. It is true that the habit of a huntress became her admirably. She wore a beaver hat with blue feathers, a surtout of gray-pearl velvet, fastened with diamond clasps, and a skirt of blue satin, embroidered with silver. On her left shoulder sparkled the diamond studs upon a bow of the same color as the plumes and the skirt.

The king trembled with joy and the cardinal with vexation. Nevertheless, distant as they were from the queen, they could not count the studs. The queen had them. The only question was, had she ten or twelve?

At that moment the violins sounded the signal for the ballet. The king advanced toward Madame la Presidente of the ball, with whom he was to dance, and his highness Monsieur the Count of Soissons, a relative of the king, with the queen. They took their places, and the ballet began.

The king figured opposite the queen, and every time that he passed by her he devoured with his eyes those studs, of which he could not ascertain the number. A cold sweat covered the brow of the cardinal.

The ballet lasted an hour. It ended amid the applause of the whole assemblage, and every one reconducted his lady to her place. But the king took advantage of the privilege he had of leaving his lady to advance eagerly toward the queen.

"I thank you, madame," said he, "for the deference you have shown to my wishes, but I think you want two of the studs, and I bring them back to you."

"How, sire!" cried the young queen, affecting surprise. "You are giving me then two more. But then I shall have fourteen."

In fact, the king counted them, and the twelve studs were all on her majesty's shoulder.

The king called the cardinal to him. "What does this mean, M. the Cardinal?" asked the king in a severe tone.

"This means, sire," replied the cardinal, "that I was desirous of presenting her majesty with these two studs and that, not daring to offer them myself, I adopted this means of inducing her to accept them."

"And I am the more grateful to your eminence," replied Anne of Austria, with a smile that proved she was not the dupe of this ingenious piece of gallantry, "from being certain these two studs have cost you as dearly as all the others cost his majesty."

Then after bowing to the king and the cardinal the queen resumed her way to the chamber in which she had dressed and where she was to take off her ball costume.

D'Artagnan, to whom Anne of Austria owed the extraordinary triumph she had obtained over the cardinal, spectful and elegant and the word "majesty" two or three times repeated indicated clearly that he was in a closet attached to the queen's chamber.

The queen appeared to be cheerful and happy, which seemed to astonish the persons who surrounded her and who were accustomed to see her almost always sad and full of care. D'Artagnan heard her approach and withdrew from the partially open door.

D'Artagnan Seized the Hand and Touched It Respectfully With His Lips.

and twice or three times he even saw the shadow of a person intercept the light.

At length a hand and an arm, surpassingly beautiful in their form and whiteness, glided through the tapestry. D'Artagnan at once comprehended that this was his recompense. He cast himself on his knees, seized the hand and touched it respectfully with his lips. Then the hand was withdrawn, leaving in his an object which he perceived to be a ring. The door immediately closed, and D'Artagnan found himself again in complete darkness.

D'Artagnan waited. After the reward of his devotion that of his love was to come. The sound of voices diminished by degrees in the adjoining chamber. The company was then heard departing, then the door of D'Artagnan's closet was opened, and Mme. Bonacieux entered quickly.

"You at last?" cried D'Artagnan.

"Silence!" said the young woman, placing her hand upon his lips. "Silence, and begone the same way you came!"

"But where and when shall I see you again?" cried D'Artagnan.

"A note which you will find at home will tell you. Begone, begone!"

D'Artagnan ran home immediately. Planchet, who had returned from London, opened the door to him.

"Has any one brought a letter for me?" asked D'Artagnan eagerly.

"No one has brought a letter, mon-

ant felt obliged not only to stop, but to enter into conversation with him.

Besides, how is it possible to avoid a little condescension toward a husband whose pretty wife has appointed a meeting with you that same evening at St. Cloud, opposite the pavilion of M. d'Estrees?

The conversation naturally fell upon the incarceration of the poor man. M. Bonacieux expatiated at great length upon the Bastille.

D'Artagnan listened to him with exemplary complaisance and when he had finished said:

"And Mme. Bonacieux, do you know who carried her off, for I do not forget that I owe to that unpleasant circumstance the good fortune of having made your acquaintance?"

"Ah!" said Bonacieux. "They took good care not to tell me that, and my wife on her part has sworn to me by all that's sacred that she does not know. But you," continued M. Bonacieux in a tone of perfect bonhomie, "what has become of you for several days past? I have not seen either you or any of your friends."

"My dear M. Bonacieux, my friends and I have been on a little journey."

"Far from Paris?"

"Oh, Lord, no! About forty leagues only. We went to take M. Athos to the waters of Forges, where my friends have remained."

"May I know whether you will be late tonight?" asked Bonacieux.

"Why do you ask me that question, my dear host?"

"Since my arrest and the robbery that was committed in my house I

"Well, don't be alarmed if I come home at 1, 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning. Indeed, do not be alarmed if I do not come at all."

This time Bonacieux became so pale that D'Artagnan could not do other-

not find such gems in his mel case."

"You think, then, I have to dread?" asked D'Artagnan must I do?"

"Be particularly, and at all your guard. The cardinal's memory and a long may depend upon it, he will by some ill turn. Take care! The least that can be expected you will be arrested. Mistake body, your friend, your mistress—your mistress in a woman is one of the calvarite means."

"It seems you are right, Planchet. All this appears to be a little mysterious."

"Monsieur jokes, but monsieur will see. He has not renounced his excursion for this evening?"

"Quite the contrary, Planchet. At 9 o'clock be ready here at the hotel. I will come and take you."

Planchet seeing there was no longer any hope of making his master renounce his project heaved a profound sigh and set to work to groom the third horse.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Pavilion.

AT 9 o'clock D'Artagnan was at the Hotel des Gardes. He found Planchet under arms. The fourth horse had arrived. Planchet was armed with his musketoon and a pistol. D'Artagnan had his sword and placed two pistols in his belt. Then both mounted and de-

His eyes were fixed upon the little pavilion situated at the angle of the wall, of which all the windows were closed with shutters, except one on the first story. Through this window shone a mild light.

D'Artagnan waited half an hour without the least impatience. The belfry of St. Cloud struck half-past 10. This time, without at all knowing why, D'Artagnan felt a cold shiver run through his veins.

The idea seized him that he had read incorrectly, and that the appointment was for 11 o'clock. But he had not been mistaken; the appointment was for 10 o'clock.

He resumed his post, beginning to be pretty uneasy at this silence and this solitude. Eleven o'clock struck.

D'Artagnan began now really to fear that something had happened to Mme. Bonacieux. He clapped his hands three times, the ordinary signal of lovers, but nobody replied to him—not even an echo. He then thought with a touch of vexation that perhaps the young woman had fallen asleep while waiting for him.

At that moment he thought of some trees, upon whose leaves the light still shone, and as one of them dropped over the road he thought that from its branches he might succeed in getting a glimpse of the interior of the room. In an instant he was among the branches, and his keen eyes plunged through the transparent window into the interior of the pavilion.

He saw a scene of fearful disorder. One of the windows was broken, the door of the chamber had been beaten in and hung, split in two, on its hinges, a table, which had been covered with an elegant supper, was overturned, the decanters broken in pieces and the fruits, crushed, strewn the floor. Everything in the apartment gave evidence of a violent and desperate struggle. D'Artagnan even fancied he could recognize amid this strange disorder fragments of garments and some bloody spots staining the cloth and the curtains.

He hastened down into the street and then perceived that the ground, trampled here and hoof marked there, presented confused traces of men and horses. Besides, the wheels of a carriage, which appeared to have come from Paris, had made a deep impression in the soft earth, which did not extend beyond the pavilion, but turned again toward Paris.

At length D'Artagnan, in following up his researches, found near the wall a woman's torn glove. Then he became almost wild. He ran along the high road, took the path he had before taken, and, coming to the ferry, closely interrogated the boatman.

About 7 o'clock in the evening, the boatman said, he had taken over a young woman enveloped in a black mantle, who appeared to be very anxious not to be seen. Everything conspired to prove to D'Artagnan that his presentiments had not deceived him and that a great misfortune had happened. He again ran back to the chateau. It appeared to him that something might have happened at the pavilion in his absence and that fresh information awaited him. The lane was still empty, and the same calm soft light shone from the window.

three men at a few paces from it. In the shade was a carriage with two horses, and a man held three saddle horses.

"Ah, my worthy gentlemen!" cried L. "What do you want?"

"Have you a ladder?" said the leader.

"Yes, monsieur, the one with which I gather my fruit."

"Lend it to us and go into your house again; there is a crown for the annoyance we have caused you. Only remember this, if you speak a word of what you may see or what you may hear, you are lost!"

"After giving the ladder I pretended to return to the house, but immediately went out at a back door, and, stealing along in the shade of the hedge, I gained yonder clump of elder, from which I could hear and see everything."

"The three men brought the carriage up quietly and took out of it a little man, stout, short, elderly and commonly dressed in clothes of a dark color, who ascended the ladder very carefully, looked suspiciously in at the window of the pavilion, came down and whispered:

"It is she!"

"Immediately he who had spoken to me approached the door of the pavilion, opened it with a key he had in his hand, closed the door and disappeared, while at the same time the other two men ascended the ladder. The little old man remained at the coach door, the coachman took care of his horses, the lackey held the saddle horses."

"All at once great cries resounded in the pavilion, and a woman came to the window and opened it as if to throw herself out of it. But as soon as she perceived the other two men she fell back and they got into the chamber. Her cries were soon stifled. Two of the men appeared, bearing the woman in their arms, and carried her to the carriage, into which the little old man got after her. The leader closed the window and came out an instant after at the door. His two companions were already on horseback. He sprang into his saddle, the lackey took his place by the coachman, the carriage went off at a quick pace, escorted by the three horsemen and all was over. From that moment I have neither seen nor heard anything."

D'Artagnan, entirely overcome by this terrible story, remained motionless and mute for a minute.

"Do you know anything," said he, "of the man who led this infernal expedition?"

"A tall, dark man, with black mustache, dark eyes and looked like a gentleman."

"That's the man!" cried D'Artagnan. "Again he, forever he! And the short one?"

"Oh, he was not a gentleman, I'll answer for it. Besides, he did not wear a sword, and the others treated him with no consideration."

"Some lackey," murmured D'Artagnan. "Poor girl, poor girl! What have they done with you?"

With a heavy heart D'Artagnan again bent his way toward the ferry. Sometimes he hoped it could not be Mme. Bonacieux and that he should find her the next day at the Louvre; sometimes he feared she had had an in-

Planchet was armed with his musketoon and a pistol. D'Artagnan had his sword and placed two pistols in his belt. Then both mounted and departed quietly. It was quite dark, and no one saw them go out.

D'Artagnan crossed the quays, went out by the gate of La Conference and proceeded along the road, much more beautiful then than it is now, which leads to St. Cloud.

As soon as the road began to be more lonely and dark Planchet drew softly nearer to D'Artagnan, so that when they entered the Bois de Boulogne he found himself riding quite naturally side by side with his master. D'Artagnan could not help perceiving that something more than usual was passing in the mind of his lackey and said:

"Well, Master Planchet, what is the matter with us now?"

"Ah, monsieur," replied Planchet, recurring to his besetting idea, "that M. Bonacieux has something vicious in his eyebrows, his lips!"

"What makes you think of Bonacieux now?"

"Monsieur, we think of what we can and not of what we will. Is not that the barrel of a musket which glitters yonder? Had we not better lower our heads?"

"In truth," murmured D'Artagnan, to whom M. de Treville's warning re-occurred, "in truth this animal will end by making me afraid." And he put his horse into a trot.

Planchet followed the movements of his master as if he had been his shadow and was soon trotting by his side.

"Are we going to continue this pace all night?" asked Planchet.

"No, for you on your part are at your journey's end. You are cold, Planchet. Go into one of those inns that you see yonder and be waiting for me at the door by 6 o'clock in the morning."

D'Artagnan sprang from his horse, threw the bridle to Planchet and departed at a quick pace, folding his cloak around him.

"Good Lord, how cold I am!" cried Planchet as soon as he had lost sight of his master, and in such haste was he to warm himself, that he went straight to a house set out with all the attributes of a suburban inn and knocked at the door.

In the meantime D'Artagnan, who had plunged into a bypath, continued his route and gained St. Cloud. He found himself soon in front of the pavilion named. It was situated in a very private spot. A high wall at the angle of which was the pavilion, ran along one side of this lane, and on the other was a little garden, connected with a poor cottage, which was protected from passers by a hedge.

He gained the place appointed, and as no signal had been given him by which to announce his presence, he waited.

Not the least noise was to be heard. It might be imagined that he was a hundred miles from the capital. D'Artagnan leaned against the hedge, after having cast a glance behind him. At the end of a few minutes the belfry of St. Cloud let fall slowly ten strokes from its sonorous jaws.

formation awaited him. The lane was still empty, and the same calm soft light shone from the window.

D'Artagnan then thought of that silent, obscure cottage. The gate of the inclosure was shut, but he leaped over the hedge, and in spite of the barking of a chained-up dog, went up to the cabin and knocked. It soon appeared to him that he heard a slight noise within, a timid noise, which seemed itself to tremble lest it should be heard.

"In the name of heaven! Listen to me. Speak!"

Then D'Artagnan ceased to knock and prayed with an accent so full of anxiety and promises, terror and cajolery, that his voice was of a nature to reassure the most fearful.

"In the name of heaven!" cried he. "Listen to me. I have been waiting for some one who is not come; I am dying with anxiety. Has anything particular happened in the neighborhood? Speak!"

The window was opened slowly, and the pale face of an old man appeared.

D'Artagnan related his story simply, with the omission of names. The old man listened attentively. When D'Artagnan had ended he shook his head.

"What do you mean?" cried D'Artagnan. "In the name of heaven, tell me, explain yourself!"

"Oh, monsieur," said the old man. "ask me nothing, for if I told you what I have seen certainly no good would befall me!"

"You have then seen something?" replied D'Artagnan. "In that case, in the name of heaven," continued he, throwing him a pistol, "tell me what you have seen and I will pledge you the word of a gentleman that not one of your words shall escape from my heart."

The old man said: "It was scarcely 6 o'clock when I heard a noise in the street. I opened the gate and saw Bonacieux and that he should find her the next day at the Louvre; sometimes he feared she had had an intrigue with another who in a jealous fit had surprised her and carried her off. His mind was torn by doubt, grief and despair.

"Oh, if I had my three friends here," cried he, "I should have at least some hopes of finding her! But who knows what is become of them?"

It was past midnight. The next thing was to find Planchet. D'Artagnan had appointed 6 o'clock in the morning with his lackey.

It came into the young man's mind that by remaining in the neighborhood he should perhaps have some light thrown upon the mysterious affair. At the sixth cabaret, then, D'Artagnan stopped, asked for a bottle of wine of the best quality and, placing himself in the darkest corner of the room, determined thus to wait till daylight. But he it remembered he was only twenty years old and at that age sleep has its rights, which it imperiously insists upon even in the saddest hearts.

Toward 6 o'clock D'Artagnan awoke with that uncomfortable feeling which generally follows a bad night. He got up, paid for his wine and went out. The first thing he perceived through the damp gray mist was honest Planchet, who, with the two horses in hand, awaited him at the door of a little cabaret.

CHAPTER XIX.

Porthos.

INSTEAD of returning directly home, D'Artagnan alighted at the door of M. de Treville and ran quickly up the stairs. This time he was determined to relate all that had passed. He would doubtless give him good advice in the whole affair, and, besides, as M. de Treville saw the queen almost every day, he might be able to get from her majesty some intelligence of the poor young woman, whom they were doubtless making pay very dearly for her devotedness to her mistress.

M. de Treville listened to the young man's account, and when D'Artagnan had finished:

"Hum," said he, "all this savors of his eminence, a league off."

"But what is to be done?" said D'Artagnan.

"Nothing, absolutely nothing, at present, but quitting Paris, as I told you, as soon as possible. I will see the queen. On your return I shall perhaps have some good news to tell you."

Determined to put the advice of M. de Treville in practice instantly, D'Artagnan directed his course toward the Rue des Fossoyeurs in order to superintend the packing of his valise. On approaching the house he perceived M. Bonacieux, in morning costume, standing at his door. D'Artagnan remarked something perfdiously significant in the play of the wrinkled features of his countenance.

TEACHERS' CAMPS.

Cadet Instructors Receive Practical Open-Air Training.

The Canadian Government, acting in conjunction with the educational authorities, has established, at several points of the Dominion, camps for the assistance and qualification of cadet-instructors. At these camps a course is outlined which if followed faithfully will enable and qualify the men—especially school teachers—to carry on cadet work and train the youth of our land along the line of outdoor activity. Skill with arms and movement in formed bodies, protection—outposts, advance flank and rear guards—attack, defence, physical training, games, and athletics, and a hearty co-operation with one's fellows for the securing of a desired corporate end, apart from an individual end, are constantly held in view in these training camps during the course of instruction.

One of these camps which will serve as an example was established at Sturgeon Creek, some seven miles out of Winnipeg, on the old Rifle Range. Here thirty-four men, nearly all teachers, has completed a six weeks' course, which entitles each to a Cadet Instructor's Certificate. Cadet corps to be officially recognized and to participate in the rights and privileges of such, must be in charge of some one who has had this or equivalent training. It is to furnish such instructors and strengthen and guide the movement that the authorities have established these camps.

Half of the thirty-four men who took the course at Sturgeon Creek were from Manitoba and half from Saskatchewan. They are allowed their transportation and $1.50 per day; their expenses are $1 per day for messing in addition to their uniforms and books, which cost about $2.50 or $3.

Apart from the valuable training these teachers got and the securing of an Instructor's Certificate, the period was a delightful and helpful outing. It might be interesting to know what a typical day's duties are, and the following will serve as a sample:

Reveille, 6 a.m.; breakfast, 7.30 a.m.; physical drill, 8.30 a.m. till 9.30 a.m.; company drill, 9.45 a.m. till 10.30 a.m.; lecture on the "Attack," 10.45 a.m. till 11.30 a.m.; infantry in battle, 11.45 a.m. till 12.30 p.m.; luncheon, 1 p.m.; musketry, 2 p.m. till 3 p.m.; signalling, 3.15 p.m. till 3.45 p.m.; lecture on "Map Reading," 7 p.m. till 8 p.m.

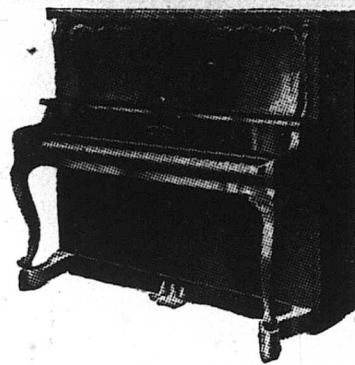

I am sure if it were more widely known among teachers many more would take the course if for nothing more than the personal benefit and enjoyment to be derived. It, however, is much more than an outing.

The establishing of corps of Cadets, Boy Scouts, Girl Guides, and instruction in drills is only part of a general movement towards the securing of a better training of the boys and girls of our land, a desire to send them into life physically healthier, mentally brighter, more alert, morally stronger and more self-reliant, with ability to act promptly and heartily together as occasion may demand in life.

The end in view is not preparation for war only, although if that should occur Canadians would be in a better position to carry on operations defensive or offensive as might be necessary for the maintenance of the security of their homes or as might be needed to preserve the integrity of the Empire. This is a duty incumbent on every one because under the Militia Act every one is practically a Canadian militiaman.—Canadian Courier.

Canada's Insane.

At the present moment there are about eleven hundred patients in the London Asylum. Whenever possible the inmates are employed in necessary work on the grounds or buildings, and in addition amusements, reading and other means of occupying the minds of the inmates are provided. All the other provincial asylums are conducted on the same lines, and every effort made to secure the recovery of patients and make their life in these institutions as comfortable, and even happy, as is possible.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on Varicose Veins. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skillful. I wrote them and got THE NEW METHOD TREATMENT. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $12 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $31 and never loose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment."

MOST country people are English enough to like home-grown and homemade food products. This is mainly why the making of small farm cheeses appeals to them. If made at the time of the year when milk is cheapest one can produce an extra nice quality of cheese
at a very reasonable cost.
Cheese does not hold its proper place in our dietary. It should be more largely used on our tables and should often take the place of meat at a meal.
The process of manufacturing cheese

be set in a vessel holding warm water,
or a clean can filled with hot water
may be put into the vat. After the whey has separated pretty well from the curd a painful may be dipped out and heated to 130 to 140 degrees. Do not have any curd in the whey. The warm whey is returned to the vat, and in a little while more whey may be dipped out and heated. Half an hour should be taken to get the curd heated to 98 degrees. If heated too quickly
the curd does not expel enough moisture, and a weak bodied cheese is the result. It is a bad fault to get the curd too warm. After it is brought to 98 degrees it is not necessary to stir continuously, but it must be frequently stirred to prevent the curd from matting, and the temperature must be maintained. It is well to keep the vat covered.

The curd is usually ready to dip in from three and a quarter to three and a half hours from the time the rennet is added to the milk. The right condition for the curd to be in at this stage may be ascertained by feeling the curd. If it is rather firm, has a shiny appearance and falls apart when pressed in the hand, it is ready to have the whey drawn. By the acidimeter
it should show from .18 to .19 per cent
of acid, or when a little of the curd
is squeezed well in the hand and pressed against a hot iron (a stove poker answers the purpose) and gently withdrawn if it leaves hairlike threads a quarter of an inch long on the iron it is a sign the whey should be removed.

If the vat is without a tap dip the curd and whey into a strainer dipper
or colander and put the curd in a large cheesecloth on a level butter worker. If you have not a butter worker devise a wooden rack for the bottom of a large tin and spread the cloth over it. The curd must be well stirred for ten or fifteen minutes to allow the whey to escape.

The curd may now be salted at the rate of one ounce to every twenty-five pounds of milk. Sprinkle the salt over the curd, stir well and allow it to stand ten or fifteen minutes.

The Cheese Hoop.

One cannot get along without a cheese hoop. It may be made of wood or heavy tin, but must be round,
straight, strong and the ends clean cut without any rim. A nice size is 6 inches in diameter by 12 inches high.
This will press a cheese weighing from six to ten pounds. The circle or follower of wood placed in the hoop on top of the curd must fit well or the cheese will have shoulders.

A bandager may be made of ordinary tin and should fit closely inside
the hoop and be four inches higher than the hoop, but must have no wire rim around it.

Cut a piece of cheesecloth the length of the bandager and the width around
it. Sew up the sides and run a thread around one end and slip it on the outside of the bandager.

Place the hoop on a board in a tin pan, put a square of cotton wet in the hot water on top of the hoop, then place on the prepared bandager and shove it to the bottom. Put in the salted curd, press down well with the hand, pull up the bandager and the cheese is inside the cheesecloth in the hoop; lay on a square of wet cotton and put on the follower.

SUPERSTITIOUS SPORTS.

Athletes 'All Have Their Methods of Dodging "Jinxes."

The superstitions of track and field athletes, ball players, lacrosse players, and sailors are as many and varied
as are those of card gamblers and racetrack followers, says Lou E.
Marsh in Toronto Star Weekly.

Recently a paper wanted a photo of the Toronto lacrosse team, which practically has the Big Four championship won, but the boys in blue chased
the photographer seven miles—if you want to believe the snapshot man—
when he tried to line them up. "Nix!
it would be a jinx," they shouted and told him to beat it. That same superstition about photographs before an event is one that prevails in almost every line of sport. It is all right if the photographer merely says, "Wait,
I want your photo," but if he says,
"You'll win, I want your photo now,"
the trouble starts, and if the photographer stalls his victim and takes the picture unawares, he is liable to collide with some one's fist.

The athletic people would naturally believe the most superstitious is the least superstitious of all. Tom Long-boat hasn't a care along that line.
He will wear any sort of a running suit you can dig him up, and so long as the shoes fit, he is not a bit particular.

Not so with Teddy Wood, the English runner. Wood always paints a cross in iodine on his left breast just before he goes on the track, and you couldn't hire him to take a bath the day of a race. If he traveled a week prior to the race and looked like a coal heaver when he hit the track
he would not do more than wash his face and hands.

Now, don't run away with the idea that Wood is sore on the bath game.

in our dietary. It should be more largely used on our tables and should often take the place of meat at a meal.
The process of manufacturing cheese on the farm should be as simple as possible, and the time from starting until the cheese is put to press should be between four and five hours. The milk must be sweet and pure, and especially of good flavor. If the fresh morning's milk be mixed with the previous day's milk properly cared for, it is usually in about the right condition for making cheese in regard to the acidity.

In factory work much stress is laid on having the milk at a proper ripeness before setting it, and either the acidimeter or the rennet test is used to determine the amount of acid present in the milk. With the acidimeter it should show from .18 to .19 per cent of acid; by the rennet test, 20 to 24 seconds, when in condition for setting.

A large tin or churn or new tub—in fact, any clean vessel which will hold milk and not injure it—will answer as a cheese vat.

Heat the milk to 86 degrees F. by setting it on the stove and stirring or by placing a clean can of hot water in it. Be prepared to go on with the work or the milk kept at this temperature may develop too much acid.

If the cheese is to be colored use a small teaspoonful of cheese color to 100 pounds of milk (ten gallons). Add the color to a pint of the milk and stir well into the milk in the vat.

For every twenty-five pounds of milk use one teaspoonful of rennet. Try to get the rennet at a cheese factory. Junket or rennet tablets, such as druggists sell, are often not satisfactory. Dilute the rennet in a pint of cold water and pour it in a stream up and down the milk, stirring well all the time and continue stirring two or three minutes. Cover the vat to keep the milk warm.

Try the milk occasionally to see when it has sufficiently coagulated by inserting the index finger into the curd and with the thumb making a dent or slight cut in the curd just at the base of the finger, then slowly moving the finger forward. If the curd breaks clean like a firm but tender custard it is ready to cut. The time from setting or adding the rennet to cutting is usually about twenty minutes. The older or riper the milk the more quickly the rennet will act upon it. Overripe milk will give a dry, acidulous cheese.

Cutting the Curd.

If you expect to make much cheese I would advise getting a set of curd knives. Use the horizontal knife first, cutting slowly lengthwise of the vat. Then with the perpendicular knife cut crosswise and afterward lengthwise of the vat. This makes the curd into cubes from a quarter inch to a half inch square, according to the knife used. For factory work the quarter inch wire knife is highly recommended. While more tedious, a long bladed carving knife or a thin bladed sword answers the purpose. First cut lengthwise into strips one-third inch wide, then crosswise the same, then horizontally as well as you can. Begin stirring gently, and continue the cutting if the carving knife is used till the curd is of uniform size.

While the stirring is going on heat may be slowly applied. The vat may be pulled up and the bandager and the cheese is inside the cheesecloth in the hoop; lay on a square of wet cotton and put on the follower.

Many contrivances may be used to supply the pressure. A cider press answers. I use the old fashioned fulcrum and lever press, as with it the pressure is continuous. This press is easily constructed. Get a strong board or a piece of scantling eight or ten feet long. Place it under a ledge, put the cheese on the floor or on a bench near the ledge and put a small block or board on the center of the cheese for the scantling to rest on. Place a heavy weight—about fifty pounds—on the end of the scantling. It is well not to put all the weight on at once.

[A—Curd from milk cooled, but not aerated; B—curd from milk aerated and cooled. The numerous round holes which are shown in B are the result of the growth of gas forming bacteria in the milk. The formation of gas holes in the curd is usually accompanied by very objectionable flavors.]

Dressing the Cheese.

The next morning the cheese should be taken from the hoop, dampened with hot water on the outside, the bandage pulled up and trimmed so as to allow it to extend half an inch over the ends. Cut a circle of stiffened cheesecloth the size of the top, place carefully on the cheese, cover with a square of wet cotton, place the hoop on top and force the cheese into it.

Finish off the other end in the same way. Put again to press till the next day. Take from the hoop and place in a cool cellar, turning it upside down every day for a month, and after that occasionally.

Do not worry if it molds. The mold will be on the outside only and should be well washed off before the cheese is cut. At the end of two months it should be ready for eating, but is better if kept for five or six months.

If the milk is sweet and good, and the necessary care be taken in the manufacture, this method produces a rich, meaty cheese, much liked by every one. The cheese resembles a nice Canadian cheddar, but is more open and softer in texture.

Alfie Shrubbs has a partiality for red jerseys, and blames the defeat of the Longboat-Shrubbs team in the big relay race in Toronto this spring to the fact that the promoters compelled him and the Indian to wear white jerseys. At that he wore his red jersey underneath.

Almost every foot runner has a favorite pair of corks to carry, or an article of clothing he insists on wearing in all his races, and rugby players appear year after year in the same old blood-stained mucky uniform simply because they absolutely refuse to change. Ned Skippon, the Argo trainer, will tell you of players who take their suits home every season end so that he will not toss them into the discard or lose them "accidentally on purpose."

Ball players' superstitions are as many as the sands of the sea. For instance, no pro. ball player will pass a base without touching it while in individual idiosyncrasy as many as there are ball players.

Any time Tim Jordan has a good day at the bat he insists on sitting on the same seat at dinner as he occupied at lunch. The other players know Timothy's hunch and often they deliberately relay on that particular chair and keep Tim out in the hall glowering and waiting until his stomach and his back bone meet, and he is mad enough to annihilate some one.

The most magnificent bowl of punch the world has ever seen was probably that provided by Right Hon. Four hoghead of brandy, a pipe of Malaga wine, 2,500 lemons, 20 gallons of lime juice, eight hoghead of water five pounds of grated nutmegs in weight, 300 toasted biscuits and 1,200 pounds of fine white sugar.

The Best of the Season.

There will be no advance in prices for the production here of "The Lion and the Mouse," Charles Klein's greatest plays which the United Play Co. will produce at the Brisco Opera House, Thursday, October 10th. The theme which Mr. Klein has taken for this drama deals with the machination of trusts and kings of finance. Indeed it may be said that "The Lion and the Mouse" displays the excellent judgement shown by Mr. Klein in presenting a phase of American life with which the public has become familiar through the newspaper and magazines of the country. He depicts the king of finance as he is, robbed of all melodramatic attributes. In opposition to him he places an equally true figure of American womanhood. It is their struggle for the final victory for the girl which constitutes the basis which this powerful drama is built. The extraordinary success of the play is well known. Its presentation here cannot but excite the widest interest.

INTERPRETATION OF WILL.

Diocese of Kingston Demanded Pay- ment of Legacy.

When Mrs. Ellen Alicia McNeill, of Napanee, died, she left an estate of over $30,000.

In her will was a clause reading as follows:

"In case I do not, through my lifetime, give and contribute towards the renovation, repairing and improvment of St. Patrick's Roman Catholic church, in the town of Napanee, $2, 000, then it is my will and desire that my executors shall out of my estate pay
and expend that amount in renovating, repairing and improving the said
church, in such a manner as may be thought best by the resident priest of the parish."

Mrs. McNeil also bequeathed $1,000 to the church for widows, and $500 to other Roman Catholic institutions.

During her lifetime Mrs. McNeill expended between $1,100 and $1,500 on installing stations of the cross in this church. Notwithstanding this payment, her executors, after her death,
received a lawyer's letter as follows:

"I have instructions from the Roman Catholic Episcopal Corporation of the diocese of Kingston to make formal demand upon the executors of the estate for the bequest of $2,000 and interest due them under the will of the deceased."

The residuary legatees opposed that claim for $2,000 and took the position that the money expended during Mrs.
McNeill's lifetime in placing in the church a series of paintings known as stations of the cross, should be deduced from the $2,000 legacy. The position taken by some of them is indica-
tion taken by some of them is indicated by letters filed. George L. Daverne, Conway, Ont., wrote: "Mrs. McNeill would not have put that clause in her will if she had intended the full amount to be paid."

Walter H. Daverne, of Victoria,
B. C., wrote to the Trusts & Guarantee Co., as follows: "I think your company should be able to understand the meaning of the will without the assistance of the parish priest, who was only to be consulted as to the disposal and not to the amount. If any of the other heirs feel as if they want to donate any of their share to the Catholic church it is nothing to me,
but as for as I am concerned, I believe in giving every person and institution
all that is coming to them in the will and no more."

On Thursday morning, however, a change has to come over the spirit of the beneficiaries' dream, says the Toronto Telegram. Their lawyer, Featherston Aylesworth, appeared in court before Chancellor Boyd at Osgoode Hall and said that his clients
were ready to accede to the church
getting the $2,000, though he was convinced that the amount already spent should be deducted. The chancellor was asked to make an order in the terms of the following consent minutes:

"This court doth order and adjudge
that under and by virtue of the terms of the ninth paragraph that the said
executors are called upon to expend $2,000, and interest thereon, from the date of the deceased Ellen Alicia Mc-Neill."

This $3,000 was the full $2,000 and the $1,000 for widows which is not in dispute. Chancellor Boyd looked at the papers and begged to be excused.

"I don't think the church is entitled to more than the balance," he declared.
"I can't make this order on consent minutes. The parties can settle what they like."

The solicitors who appeared on the

Good Spices for Pickles.

You can't make good pickles unless you get good spices. We have extra selected qualities at "Wallace's Drug Store". Our genuine catsup spice is good. If you have trouble with your catsup spoiling try our preserving powder—it will prevent fermentation. For preserving pears or for marmalade be sure to try our green ginger.

What An Advertisement Does.

Did you ever think what your ad. in the newspaper is doing you? When you close your store in the evening and go home to your family and fire-side, not thinking about your business at all, then it is that the paper is being pored over in hundreds of homes—the home from which your trade is drawn. And there is your ad. doing its work silently, but surely, and if you have taken the trouble to make it attractive its work will be all the more attractive. This is repeated over and over again, and is no doubt what inspired some writer to call newspaper advertising a "silent drummer."

Team of Horses Drowned.

On Wednesday afternoon Mr. Roy Frink, Ernestown, brought a load of apples to Symington's evaporator and after unloading was waiting to complete his business when his team took fright at a couple of dogs fighting, and circling around the corner of the evaporator the team ran down to the dock between the evaporator and the Gas House, and plunged into the river dragging the waggon after them. In jumping into the river the horses became tangled up in the harness and before they could be got out both horses were dead. Mr. Frink's loss is a heavy one as the team were valuable.
